Kansas Press Association, discuss the public policy merits of the probable cause affidavits bill with Sen. Julia Lynn, a Republican from Olathe.

Kansas sheds ‘outlier’ role on affidavits

After years of struggle and stonewalling by prosecutors and law enforcement, the days of Kansas as an “outlier” on police records is about to become a thing of the past.

Gov. Sam Brownback Wednesday signed the legislation into law that provides for the opening of probable cause affidavits used to secure arrest and search warrants.

The Kansas Legislature, with just one vote against the measure in the House and Senate, said the time had come to shine light on the documents used to show cause when law enforcement officers want to arrest someone or search their person or premises.

“Rep. John Rubin wrote the bill, fought for it tooth and nail and ultimately helped lead the charge to change the face of the justice system of Kansas,” said Richard Gannon, director of governmental affairs for the Kansas Press Association. “He revealed Kansas as an outlier on this issue.”

Rubin, a Shawnee Republican, utilized just about every parliamentary procedure available to keep the probable cause af-

KPA joins Vietnam vet photo project

The Kansas Press Association has joined a nationwide effort to help collect a photo of every soldier who gave the ultimate sacrifice during the Vietnam War.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Foundation project, “Faces Never Forgotten,” is seeking help obtaining missing photos of Vietnam veterans from Kansas. The foundation wants to complete an electronic “Wall of Faces” in the new education center at the Vietnam Memorial Wall.

“We think newspapers are the best avenue available to assist in this project, so we’re asking the editors and publishers of Kansas newspapers to help lead an effort in each of our communities to collect photographs and help this project along,” said Doug Anstaett, KPA executive director.

You may view the gallery in progress at <http://www.vvmf.org/Wall-of-Faces/>.

Newspaper advertising gets high marks for voter reach

Another election season is under way, and newsrooms are gearing up for campaigns that last weeks and even months. Coverage will consume the news pages from candidate profiles and community forums to photo requests and letters to the editor. And don't forget the steady barrage of press releases.

Step-by-step coverage of political campaigns likely prompts more than one publisher to utter: Why are we giving the candidates all this free publicity? Where are their ads?

A first response: Have you approached the candidates? Better yet, are you prepared to pitch an ad campaign?

In other words, does your newspaper have a plan to introduce yourselves to the candidates and promote how you can generate attention for their campaigns?

It's important to remember that many candidates are novices to the political arena, especially when it comes to launching and running a campaign. This is especially true in local campaigns. Newspapers have an opportunity to be a key adviser in how they organize and spend their advertising dollars.

One of the first orders of business in organizing election coverage is convening a joint meeting of the news and advertising staffs. Reporters can familiarize sales representatives with the candidates and the issues. Ad reps can likely provide some valuable information for the news staff, too.

Here is one checklist as newspapers prepare to pitch political advertising. Convene a brainstorming session, and you'll likely generate more ideas:

Introduce yourself to the candidates. Make an appointment to connect face-to-face as soon as they announce their candidacies.

Familiarize yourself with the races and the issues. News and advertising departments should connect early in the election cycle and communicate regularly. Adjust ad campaigns as the issues change.

Assign ad reps to specific races so they are comfortable with the candidates and the dynamics of the race.

Understand who controls the advertising dollars. In local races, candidates themselves may oversee all aspects of the campaign. As you ascend the political ladder – legislative and congressional races, for example – most candidates may have campaign managers who control the purse strings.

Be aware of key advertising opportunities for maximum exposure for the candidates. For example, when will candidate profiles be published? Will the newsroom be covering specific candidate forums? Identify the editions when the reports will appear. Will a Voter Guide be produced?

Organize your own candidate forum and seek sponsors.

Develop advertising packages. Present candidates with the spectrum of opportunities from print editions to audio and video on the Web to social media channels. Present yourself as a one-stop-shop for their advertising needs.

Create a separate tab on your website for election coverage. Promote advertising and candidate messages here as well.

Be aware of legislative and/or congressional seats in targeted or swing districts. Extra advertising dollars may be available from the respective political parties or special-interest groups.

Know your market share. Most community newspapers are the primary source of local news; make the argument that candidates should divide their advertising dollars accordingly.

Which style of advertising works? It's obvious

Let's say you're considering the purchase of a new widget. Your current widget is working OK, but you know that there have been some new innovations lately and you'd like to see what's available.

So you go to a meeting which features widget manufacturers.

John Foust

You notice a couple of things when you walk into the room:

(1) A lot of people are vying for your attention and

(2) They seem to fall into four general categories. Let's take a look at what you encounter in that crowded room:

1. The guy with the loud, plaid sport coat, white shoes and a big cigar. His approach is big, bold and obnoxious, just like his outfit. It's his strategy to make you look at him before you notice anyone else. Yesiree, Bub.

He'll shout and jump up and down on his display table until you give him your attention. And if you happen to glance at someone else while he's talking, he'll slap you on the back and claim that his widget is the best in the history of widgetry.

The banner over his booth reads, "For all your widget needs." His favorite words are "unbelievable" and "fantastic." He has exclamation marks on his tie.

2. The lady making balloon animals. Instead of talking about widgets, she's tries to dazzle you with glamour and artistry.

"Now that I have your attention, let me make another balloon animal. How about a rhinoceros? That will really impress you. Our widgets? Oh, they are top-notch. But let's not talk about that. Let's focus on my creativity. Stand here in front of my booth for a while, and I'll make a pelican on roller skates."

3. The guy making deep philosophical statements.

He must be talking about widgets, because he's in the widget room — but you're not completely sure. His favorite sayings seem to be "We make life good," "Making goodness for 50 years," and "Goodness is really good." He doesn't have a booth. He just wanders around saying seemingly profound — but empty — words.

4. The lady with lots of information. Her banner has a clearly defined benefit statement. Her company literature describes the ways her widget can solve specific problems for prospective customers. And she shows a genuine interest in each customer who stops to talk. She's the opposite of the other three people. She's not trying to shout the competition, she's not trying to grab anyone's attention with razzle dazzle, and she's not making vague product statements. She communicates concise, relevant information about her line of widgets.

Which widget person would you rather talk to?

The shouter, the dazzler, the vague sloganeer or the person who understands what you need from a widget?

Each of these four people represents a particular style of advertising. There are ads that shout to get your attention, ads that are artsy and off topic, ads with meaningless words — and ads which focus on the interests of specific target audiences. Which style has credibility? Which style works? The answer is obvious.

Promoting a candidate is no different than promoting a new store or a new product. Candidates stand their best chance of securing votes if they are in front of their constituencies early and often. A successful advertising campaign will introduce the candidates and underscore what they bring to the table for their constituencies, the voters.

In that regard, newspapers should be unabashed in promoting their ability to deliver those votes. Even in today's fractured media landscape, community newspapers remain the primary source of local news. That's underscored by MRI – Survey of the American Consumer: "Nationwide, newspapers have been ranked as the media used most by the 'Influential' community. Local newspapers, overwhelmingly, still hold the largest share of the adult audience in their market compared to any other local media."

You should be first at the doorstep of the candidates, announcing why your newspaper is in the best position to deliver consistent and credible messaging for their campaigns.

‘What’s old is new again’ may be our answer

I had the privilege to attend a “Ranch to Table” supper at a farm near Olsburg a few weeks ago. The event featured locally-raised meats and other side dishes prepared by chefs from 715 Restaurant in Lawrence, prepared for a group of chefs who were touring Kansas farms that were supplying meat for their high-end restaurants in New York City. (It’s pretty easy to cover a feature story like this!)

The chefs talked about a return to basics, where their customers wanted real food raised the old-fashioned way. Evidently, there is demand in the big city to dine like our grandparents ate ... I suppose with a few modern flavors and preparations mixed in.

Fresh lamb roasted on an open fire for five hours (low and slow, as they say). Porchetta, essentially pork loin wrapped in pork belly, was air-cured and slow-cooked before flash-frying in a vat of oil to crisp the exterior. Sausage made by hand in three ways, traditional, hot and curried, all with pork raised the old way on a dirt lot where pigs can lull in mud puddles under the sun. When combined with fresh and simply prepared vegetables, the meal tasted like the fresh Kansas landscape after a fulfilling day of work.

The brewmeister from Tallgrass Brewery in Manhattan was on hand to provide a selection of his micro-brew varieties. The beer was also created individually and uniquely. “Craft brew” is just a modern version of what the old Germans used to do in their basements in my neck of the Kansas prairie a couple generations ago. You could taste the individual elements of these beer varieties, rather than a typical mass-produced industrial beer.

The entire experience was a sampling of

Weekly newspapers on display at Newseum in Washington

Weeklies have news to celebrate. The Newseum displayed the front pages of weekly newspapers in its Today’s Front Pages Gallery in Washington, D.C., for the first time.

The International Society of Weekly Newspaper Editors organized a “front page blitz” April 17. Members e-mailed about 130 front pages to Newseum and followed up with Facebook posts and tweets.

The Newseum changed its policy about the exhibit later that day.

a growing trend — what’s old is new again.

Consumers are demanding attention to detail again. A packet of orange powder that miraculously turns into “cheese” when water is added, is no longer the ultimate goal of the mealtime experience. An artisanal cheese made from the milk of a herd of Jersey cows raised by a farmer in Iowa, however, adds depth and breadth to the flavor of the meal.

People want authenticity, and they’re willing to pay for it.

I can’t help but feel like the Ranch to

Table trend, or the skyrocketing popularity of craft brew, or the creation of farmers markets all over America, has some relevance in the newspaper industry.

If the trend is “what’s old is new again,” does that mean our modern affair with easy internet headlines might eventually give way to demand for solid and thorough reporting? Will hot gossip on Facebook fall out of favor and instead people will want a well-written feature story about our neighbor down the street? Will fancy Instagram photos lose ground to the work of real photojournalists?

I think it will. I don’t know why I have such optimism for our industry, but don’t you think people are starting to come to their senses and seeing real, measurable value in what we do?

To influence the process, do we need to start thinking of ourselves as artisanal newspapers? If that were our mission, what would that look like? If we’re wanting to give extreme attention to the ingredients of our product, what would we do different than we do now? If “what’s old is new again,” what effort do we need to bring back?

I hear old newspaper publishers used to have cocktail hour after work most days. To figure this out, maybe we need to bring that back? Or maybe I’m involuntarily thinking I need to drink more craft brew as “research.”

Either way, I firmly believe a re-commitment to our core values as journalists can have nothing but real, measurable benefits to our industry. I would challenge each and every newspaper in Kansas to reflect on what we do each week or each day and figure out how we can consistently put the best possible product on the racks for our customers.

Are you Kraft orange powder? Or are you a natural rind, semi-firm, raw Jersey cow milk cheese?

It is a question worth asking.

Much credit is owed to KPA Executive Director Doug Anstaett and KPA Director of Government Affairs Rich Gannon for their work this legislative session.

The approval of legislation to open probable cause affidavits for arrest (and as a surprise at the end, search warrants) to the public is a huge leap forward for governmental transparency in Kansas.

Doug and Rich are quick to pass credit on to others who helped in the cause, but I can’t help but feel the work of the Kansas Press Association was integral to this effort. We led the way and worked to get it done.

It’s just another example of the importance of our association.

Some among us may be quick to complain about membership fees, or lower reimbursement rates, but the value of work like this easily eclipses what we pay each year in dues.

Kudos to Doug and Rich and the staff at KPA for continued excellence.

THIS MONTH’S QUESTION

Q. I’ve read about Anti-SLAPP legislation. Is Kansas following suit?

A. SLAPP stands for Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation. Therefore, Anti-SLAPP refers to legislation that makes such lawsuits more difficult to win. While we don’t have any Anti-SLAPP legislation on the books right now, a bill was introduced in 2014 to accomplish something quite similar. It was HB 2711, introduced by Rep. Jan Pauls, a Hutchinson Democrat. Her legislation, called the Public Speech Protection Act, would require those who would sue to suppress someone’s right to free speech to meet a fairly high burden of proof. KPA will support such legislation if it is reintroduced next year.

“We thought this legislation was dead at least three times,” Gannon said. “But each time, Rep. Rubin found another way to resurrect the language. In the end, he even delivered more than he had originally sought. He got search warrant affidavits open as well.”

The long and winding road to the bill’s passage didn’t end until the last day of the session. The journey included a concentrated lobbying effort by Gannon and Ron Keefover, president of the Kansas Sunshine Coalition for Open Government, a three-part series called “Dark Kansas” by KSHB-TV in Kansas City that was produced by former Kansas City Star reporter Karen Dillon, a cartoon and editorial from Dane Hicks of the Anderson County Review and a number of strong editorials from newspaper editors across Kansas.

KPA Legislative Committee chair Olaf Frandsen, editor and publisher of the Salina Journal, testified a number of times in Topeka, contrasting Kansas law with the open records of Texas, where he was a publisher before coming to Kansas two years ago.

KPA media law consultant Mike Kautsch provided comprehensive testimony about why the records should be open and obliterated the argument from prosecutors that opening these records would put them in jeopardy of breaking Supreme Court rules regarding extrajudicial statements.

In the end, the Kansas County and District Attorneys Association, led by Riley County District Attorney Barry Wilkerson and Sedgewick County District Attorney Marc Bennett, stepped forward to help broker the final deal.

The House voted 123-1 and the Senate 40-0 on the final conference committee report.

“While the language wasn’t perfect from our point of view,” said Doug Anstaett, KPA executive director, “it moved the needle so far in our direction that our state can boast of an end to its notorious reputation of sealed affidavits.

“And when you throw in the fact that search warrant affidavits also are now open, this is a huge victory for the people of Kansas. The public must be able to scrutinize our law enforcement officers and prosecutors. This bill really makes that much more possible now.”

The new law goes into effect July 1 and is not retroactive.

A copy of the conference committee report is appended to today’s Publisher.

See sections 3 and 4 to review the changes on both arrest and search affidavits.

Today's Publisher includes two lists of all the Kansas veterans where pictures are needed, one sorted alphabetically by hometown and the other alphabetically by name.

"Several state press associations have joined this effort," Anstaett said. "Help us complete a great tribute to our veterans."

If you find a name from your coverage area on the list and don't already have the picture in your newspaper files, please consider running the attached news release seeking the public's assistance in locating one.

Send the pictures, including identifying information, to Emily Bradbury at ebradbury@kspress.com.

She will compile the pictures and send them on to the VVMF in Washington, D.C.

The plan is to get the pictures to the foundation by Nov. 11, 2014, Veteran's Day.

"The newspapers in Kansas can serve a valuable role in making sure as many of the 265 missing pictures of Kansas soldiers are found and included on the 'Wall of Faces,'" Anstaett said.

A sample news release is also attached for your use in your newspaper. Just make sure you fill in the blanks with your own information and the names of soldiers from your area for which you need pictures.

NEWS BRIEFS

Jackson new KPA ad director

Amber Jackson has been named the new advertising director for the Kansas Press Association.

Jackson was born in California but was raised on a farm near Augusta.

Jackson served as sales director for the Augusta Gazette from 2002 until 2009. She left to work as a medical assistant at a clinic in Wichita, but said she had missed ad sales.

She attended Butler County Community College, Heritage College and Friends University and fondly recalls participating in a KPA Ad Academy in 1999.

"We're excited to bring Amber on board," said Doug Anstaett, KPA executive director. "She is passionate about newspapers and print advertising and will be a great addition to our team."

She trained under the late Gazette Publisher Carter Zerbe.

Jackson succeeds Sara Marstall, who resigned to accept a marketing position at Furniture Mall of Kansas

She and her husband, Matt, have two sons: Canon, 5, will start kindergarten this fall; Foster is 6 months old.

He married his high school sweetheart, Shirley, and they have three daughters.

News switches to once-a-week

The Russell County News switched to once-a-week publication on May 1.

Jack Krier, publisher, said the News was dropping one of its weekly publications because of the bad economy and continued increases in postage rates.

"We want to continue to be a viable publication," he said, "and the best way to achieve that is to switch to publishing just once a week."

Hays buys website company

The Hays Daily News has purchased Nex-Tech's eBusBuilder, a website design service.

The acquisition expands HDN's digital capabilities, which include the company's Pixel Power Haus division.

The following newspapers sold either direct placement, Kansas Display Ad Network, Kansas Classified Ad Network or out-of-state network ads in April 2014.

Make an ad placement into another newspaper in Kansas or elsewhere and share the KPA commission.

- KDAN — Anderson County Review placed three ads and retained a profit of $2,475; Ellsworth County Independent-Reporter sold one ad for a profit of $400.
- KCAN — GateHouse Media sold 20 classified ads and retained $3,192 in profit; Lincoln Sentinel-Republican sold one ad and retained $150 profit; Anthony Republican sold five ads and retained $750 profit.

Some signs that future of newspapers is bright

I find myself becoming more optimistic each day about the future of newspapers. Yes, we continue to face serious struggles in our business.

Readership challenges.
Shrinking advertising bases.
Journalism school graduates far more interested in heading into glamour jobs in public relations than into the newspaper industry.

Newspapers cutting back on publication days.

Yet, in Kansas and elsewhere, there appears to be a growing trend of local ownership — and younger faces on our mastheads.

If anything is going to save the printed newspaper industry, it is new blood and a continued growth in local ownership.

And who said you have to be a professionally trained journalist to be a great newspaper editor?

Our current president, Dan Thalman, didn't take a single journalism course in college. Yet he is one of our up-and-coming publishers who has brought youthful enthusiasm to our industry and his newspapers in Washington and Linn-Palmer.

Joey Young has expanded from ownership of The Clarion in south-central Kansas to addition of a publication in Maize and now the majority purchase of the Hillsboro Free Press and its sister publications.

Jason Jump has brought more energy to the Kingman Leader-Courier, as has Marcus Ashlock to the Syracuse Journal.

Cliff Blackmore has purchased the Tri-State News in Elkhart and Lloyd Huff the Rawlins County Square Deal in Atwood.

This is not meant to be a comprehensive list, but the investments in these newspapers indicate a number of people believe our industry has a future, even though it may have a different look, a different focus or even, eventually, a delivery method other than on newsprint.

I've been contacted by a number of owners who are interested in buying more newspapers and want to be advised when one comes onto the market in their area. That indicates a high degree of optimism about the future to me.

We know the world is changing, and so is ours.

I'm almost too old to change, but the readership of our future may require that we offer information in different forms than we do today.

Those who innovate, who listen to what the market is telling them and who react to those changes will prosper.

That's not to say radical changes are needed in every case. Many newspapers will continue to thrive because they are simply serving their communities well.

But I say welcome to those with new ideas. They already are helping to shape the newspaper industry of tomorrow.

Re: News release on Vietnam veteran photo project

Dear Colleagues:

The following news release should be run in your newspaper if you have Vietnam-era soldiers from your coverage area who died in action and are on the accompanying list. We are trying to help the new visitors' center at the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C. collect pictures of those soldiers.

Please join this meaningful and rewarding effort. The release is below. Please search the attached list for soldiers from and area and insert their names and personal information in the appropriate spot.

NEWS RELEASE

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Foundation project, "Faces Never Forgotten," needs help obtaining missing photos of Vietnam veterans from Kansas.

These photos will help complete an electronic "Wall of Faces" in the new education center at the Vietnam Memorial Wall in Washington, D.C.

We at the (insert your newspaper name here) want to help locate family members or friends of those listed below who can provide a photo of the soldier.

If you have a picture and can mail it to our newspaper or drop it by our office, we'll create an electronic file and make sure it gets to the right place.

You may view the gallery in progress at <http://www.vvmf.org/Wall-of-Faces/>. The wall is designed as a moving tribute to fallen soldiers from your area.

We want to get the photos to VVMF by Nov. 11, 2014, Veteran's Day. It is the very least we can do to show our honor and love for these American soldiers. The photographs needed from our area include:

Sec. 5. K.S.A. 2013 Supp. 22-3402 is hereby amended to read as follows: 22-3402. (a) If any person charged with a crime and held in jail solely by reason thereof shall not be brought to trial within ~~90~~ 150 days after such person's arraignment on the charge, such person shall be entitled to be discharged from further liability to be tried for the crime charged, unless the delay shall happen as a result of the application or fault of the defendant or a continuance shall be ordered by the court under subsection (e).

(b) If any person charged with a crime and held to answer on an appearance bond shall not be brought to trial within 180 days after arraignment on the charge, such person shall be entitled to be discharged from further liability to be tried for the crime charged, unless the delay shall happen as a result of the application or fault of the defendant, or a continuance shall be ordered by the court under subsection (e).

(c) If any trial scheduled within the time limitation prescribed by subsection (a) or (b) is delayed by the application of or at the request of the defendant, the trial shall be rescheduled within 90 days of the original trial deadline.

(d) After any trial date has been set within the time limitation prescribed by subsection (a), (b) or (c), if the defendant fails to appear for the trial or any pretrial hearing, and a bench warrant is ordered, the trial shall be rescheduled within 90 days after the defendant has appeared in court after apprehension or surrender on such warrant. However, if the defendant was subject to the 180-day deadline prescribed by subsection (b) and more than 90 days of the original time limitation remain, then the original time limitation remains in effect.

(e) For those situations not otherwise covered by subsection (a), (b) or (c), the time for trial may be extended for any of the following reasons:

(1) The defendant is incompetent to stand trial. If the defendant is subsequently found to be competent to stand trial, the trial shall be scheduled as soon as practicable and in any event within 90 days of such finding;

(2) a proceeding to determine the defendant's competency to stand trial is pending. If the defendant is subsequently found to be competent to stand trial, the trial shall be scheduled as soon as practicable and in any event within 90 days of such finding. However, if the defendant was subject to the 180-day deadline prescribed by subsection (b) and more than 90 days of the original time limitation remain, then the original time limitation remains in effect. The time that a decision is pending on competency shall never be counted against the state;

(3) there is material evidence which is unavailable; that reasonable efforts have been made to procure such evidence; and that there are reasonable grounds to believe that such evidence can be obtained and trial commenced within the next succeeding 90 days. Not more than one continuance may be granted the state on this ground, unless for good cause shown, where the original continuance was for less than 90 days, and the trial is commenced within 120 days from the original trial date; or

(4) because of other cases pending for trial, the court does not have sufficient time to commence the trial of the case within the time fixed for trial by this section. Not more than one continuance of not more than 30 days may be ordered upon this ground.

(f) In the event a mistrial is declared, a motion for new trial is granted or a conviction is reversed on appeal to the supreme court or court of appeals, the time limitations provided for herein shall commence to run from the date the mistrial is declared, the date a new trial is ordered or the date the mandate of the supreme court or court of appeals is filed in the district court.

(g) If a defendant, or defendant's attorney in consultation with the defendant, requests a delay and such delay is granted, the delay shall be charged to the defendant regardless of the reasons for making the request, unless there is prosecutorial misconduct related to such delay. If a delay is initially attributed to the defendant, but is subsequently charged to the state for any reason, such delay shall not be considered against the state under subsections (a), (b) or (c) and shall not be used as a ground for dismissing a case or for reversing a conviction unless not considering such delay would result in a violation of the constitutional right to a speedy trial or there is prosecutorial misconduct related to such delay.

(h) When a scheduled trial is scheduled within the period allowed by subsections (a), (b) or (c) and is delayed because a party has made or filed a motion, or because the court raises a concern on its own, the time elapsing from the date of the making or filing of the motion, or the court's raising a concern, until the matter is resolved by court order shall not be considered when determining if a violation under subsections (a), (b) or (c) has occurred. If the resolution of such motion or concern by court order occurs at a time when less than 30 days remains under the provisions of subsections (a), (b) or (c), the time in which the defendant shall be brought to trial is extended 30 days from the date of the court order.

(i) If the state requests and is granted a delay for any reason provided in this statute, the time elapsing because of the order granting the delay shall not be subsequently counted against the state if an appellate court later determines that the district court erred by granting the state's request unless not considering such delay would result in a violation of the constitutional right to a speedy trial or there is prosecutorial misconduct related to such delay.

Sec. 6. K.S.A. 22-3605 is hereby amended to read as follows: 22-3605. (a) Any appellate court may reverse, affirm or modify the judgment or order appealed from, or may order a new trial in the district court. In either case the cause must be remanded to the district court with proper instructions, together with the decision of the appellate court, within the time and in the manner to be prescribed by rule of the supreme court.

(b) (1) In appeals from criminal actions and in other post-conviction actions arising from criminal prosecutions, the issuance of the mandate from the appellate court shall be automatically stayed when:

(A) A party files a notice with the appellate court that it intends to file a petition for writ of certiorari to the United States supreme court; and

(B) the time has not expired for filing such a petition under applicable United States supreme court rules.

(2) If the mandate from the appellate court has already been issued when a party files its notice, the mandate from the appellate court shall be withdrawn and stayed.

(3) The stay shall be lifted when:

(A) If a petition for writ of certiorari to the United States supreme court is filed, the court denies such petition or issues such court's final order following granting such petition; or

(B) if no petition for writ of certiorari to the United States supreme court is filed, the time expires for filing such petition under applicable United States supreme court rules.

Sec. 7. K.S.A. 22-2302 and 22-3605 and K.S.A. 2013 Supp. 21-5417, as amended by section 1 of 2014 Senate Bill No. 256, 21-6329, as amended by section 8 of 2014 Senate Bill No. 256, 22-2502 and 22-3402 are hereby repealed.";
